

POLICE MAGICIANS DAZE ROBBED MAN WITH HIS WALLET

Loot and Two Prisoners Await Car Gang's Victim's Arrival at Headquarters.

John Ransuuri, a simple-minded blond giant, had an experience to-day, while en route for the Campania on which he was to sail for Helsinki, Finland, which convinced him that the New York Police Department is composed of magicians. He had received word, at Loon Lake, where he was working, that his father was dying in the old country. He started for home, stopping last night with his sister at No. 474 Third avenue. This morning John, his sister and his niece, crossed Union Square to take a car for the pier.

Three loungers saw John lumbering, both hands filled with valises, and followed. Detectives McKenna and Casassa, also lounging, observed the sudden activity and trailed behind.

John gave no thought of the two dapper young fellows who boarded the car just ahead of him, but the detectives did. John was jostled from behind and blocked in front. Up went his coat, out came the wallet from his hip pocket, one young fellow an east, and two west. McKenna put after the eastbound man, who, when he got near the subway, dropped the wallet.

McKenna stooped to pick it up, losing his man at Thirtieth street and Third avenue, he went on to Police Headquarters with the wallet. Casassa put after the other two. From the sidewalk jumped Detectives Griffin and Finn and nabbed the westbound sprinters.

John, his sister and his niece were taken quickly to Police Headquarters, where Capt. Dunn listened to their woes, and then whipped a wallet out of his hip pocket.

"Is this the one you lost?" he wanted to know.

John, his sister and his niece were speechless with amazement. Then in walked Casassa, with Benjamin Lieberman, twenty-one years old, of No. 27 East Houston street, and Benjamin Stoltz, thirty years old, of No. 41 East Eighth street, whom John recognized as the pair who had jostled him and his sister on the car. John got his purse and went to Finland rejoicing.

BRACKETT SETTLES SUIT BASED ON $8,800 NOTE.

State Senator Pays in Full After a Long Wrangle in the Courts.

After much legal wrangling and many delays it was announced to-day that the suit brought by Elizabeth S. C. Seavey, as executrix under the will of Julia Y. Clement, against State Senator Edgar T. Brackett to recover on a note which Senator Brackett had guaranteed had been settled. The note was for $8,800, and the settlement was for $11,044, the difference being the accrued interest. Mrs. Clement, who died last February, loaned the Congress Hall Hotel at Saratoga the money in question, on the guarantee of Senator Brackett. When the note fell due payment was not forthcoming, and suit was instituted.

Senator Brackett put in a counter-claim for legal services rendered to Mrs. Clement's husband, Col. H. S. Clement of New York and Saratoga. The announcement that Senator Brackett had settled in full, despite his answer to the suit, caused considerable surprise. Just what led him to make the settlement was not disclosed.
